

NATIONAL BRIEFING

Thursday, August 23, 2007; Page D02

LABOR

Immigrants Compete for Visas

More than 1 million skilled immigrant workers are competing for 120,000 permanent U.S. resident visas each year, according to a report by the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation. The study said many workers, including Indian and Chinese scientists and engineers, could return home because of the competition. The study did not say how many workers might have already returned to their native countries.